Vol. 17 No. 3 September 24, 1992

New Chancellor, Chairman take office Oct. 1

As announced this summer, Concordia has a new Chancellor and Chairman of the Board who will both assume their responsibilities on Thursday, Oct. 1, 1992.

The Rt. Hon. Jeanne Sauvé, former Governor-General of Canada, will succeed Chancellor Alan B. Gold, former Chief Justice of the Québec Superior Court. Reginald K. Groome, former Chairman and President of Hilton Canada Inc. and Chairman of the Hotel Association of Canada, will take over from Chairman of the Board P. André Gervais, senior partner and President of the Montréal law firm Mackenzie Gervais.

Writer-in-Residence 3

Poet Sharon Thesen, the Creative Writing Programme's writer-in-residence this term, comes from Vancouver, but every time she comes to Québec, the province's turbid politics inspires new poetry.

New Library Complex 6

The opportunity to inaugurate a major new Concordia building comes around only once in a great while — the Henry F. Hall Building was opened in 1966 — so, this generation of Concordians should not miss this one. The community is invited to the official opening of the new downtown library complex on Wednesday, Sept. 30.

Homecoming 11

The annual gathering of alumni and present Concordians will be launched this year with a concert of fine music, theatre and dance.

A special 4-page supplement containing the programme for the Dimesions of Literacy in a Multicultural Society conference is included in this issue.

Gail Valaskakis

Dean with a difference

by Barbara Black

Some administrators grit their teeth when knotty problems cross their desks, but Gail Guthrie Valaskakis isn't one of them.

"I like talking to people, and I like solving problems," said the new Dean of Arts and Science when asked whether she minded all the paperwork and telephone diplomacy. "When you can make an academic task easier to do and better appreciated, it's exciting."

In fact, Valaskakis's new job seems to fit her like a glove. The various threads of her life — theatre, teaching, research into native people's interaction with telecommunications, and community development — have become part of a bright, tough fabric which is wholly original to her.

Many years of involvement in the deeply consensual world of native affairs, in particular, have given her a commitment to co-operative governance, at a time when the University seems ripe for it.

Much appreciated for her direct, accommodating style, Valaskakis had been Acting Dean since last January, and was confirmed in the post as the term ended in May. The appointment is for five years.

Arts and Science, as well as being the intellectual foundation of universities everywhere, remains the most popular academic field at Concordia. As dean, Valaskakis will direct the affairs of more faculty and students than are to be found in the other three Faculties put together.

Her star has risen steadily since she arrived in the late 1960s at Concordia's predecessor, Loyola College, to lecture in

Senate shows support for Faculty of Engineering and Computer Science

by Donna Varrica

There were several moving moments at last week's Senate meeting, the first since the tragic events of Aug. 24.

The meeting began with two minutes of silence in remembrance of three slain colleagues, Professors Matthew Douglass, Michael Hogben and A. Jaan Saber, and a poem read by Political Science Professor Maria Peluso.

In the course of regular business, Biology

Professor Elaine Newman raised two points related to the tragedy. The first was to set up a Senate committee of faculty members to provide education and guidance for the children of the shooting victims.

"These children have been robbed not only of their fathers. Who will teach them about microscopes now, and share their knowledge with them?" she asked, suggesting that the money earmarked for the Rector's Fall Reception, which was cancelled in light of the events, be put toward starting the fund.

Robert Parker, Dean of the Faculty of Fine Arts, agreed, saying that though the com-

Phoivos Ziogas, dead at 48

As Concordia's Thursday Report went to press, it learned that Electrical and Computer Engineering Chair Phoivos Ziogas died of his wounds on Wednesday afternoon at the Montreal General Hospital.

He had sustained extensive damage to his internal organs as a result of a gunshot to the abdomen in the Aug. 24 shooting on the ninth floor of the Henry F. Hall Building.

Ziogas joined the University in 1978 and became a full professor in 1986. He had been Chair of the Department since 1989. He is survived by his wife Frances and two children.

Additional information will be provided in next week's issue of CTR.

Germany's 'flip-flop' in interest rates triggered European monetary crisis, says Ahmad

It wasn't simply Germany's lowering of its interest rates that sent several European economies into crisis last week, said Economics Professor Jaleel Ahmad. It was the fact that the country first raised the rate, then suddenly lowered it that caused the instability in the foreign exchange market. Ahmad, recently nominated to the International Panel of Fiscal Experts of the International Monetary Fund, has done research on the effect of 'news' on money markets.

"What happened last week was a result of Germany's quick lowering of its interest rate. Two months ago, the country raised its interest rate; the deficit caused by reunification had to be financed. That meant that capital flowed into Germany. Other European countries opposed the move because it meant that they, too, had to raise their interest rates to discourage the capital flight from their countries. So, there was a lot of pressure on Germany to lower their rate.

"Last week, Germany capitulated and this precipitated the crisis of instability. It was the 'flip-flop' that caused the crisis. We know from current research that abrupt changes cause exchange rate crises. Speculative buying and selling is caused by the 'news,' something which is reflected in actions of this kind which are not supported by changes in fundamentals such as rates of inflation and rates of economic growth.

"This action gave the impression to the foreign exchange market that Germany had lost its resolve. The slight drop in German rates of interest, of course, did not help the country's trading partners. On the other hand, it destabilized the exchange markets around the world. In the long run, the country's requirement for capital wouldn't have lasted that long. In any case, no country can go on servicing a debt load forever. Germany would have had to increase its exports to finance its debt. If that corrective mechanism had been allowed to work, the European recession would have deepened slightly, but not for long, and the foreign exchange market situation would have avoided the turbulence it has suffered.

"What happened to the British and Italian currencies was not all that unexpected because the exchange rate mechanism in Europe had been under strain for some time; changes were required. The European Exchange Rate Mechanism authorities should have adjusted these rates in order to avoid such a serious devaluation."

University, CLSC team up to study senior abuse

by Kelly Wilton

Two men posing as inspectors entered Frederic Gelin's house, tying his hands together so tightly that his wrists bled.

One of his attackers then hurled the 73 year-old former Canadian Army Corporal to the floor, jumping on his chest repeatedly. The other man covered Gelin's head with a blanket, held a knife to his throat and told him that if he didn't hand over his money, his cat would be set alight.

But Gelin refused to tell his attackers where he kept his money.

"They poured oil on me and said they would cut my throat and then set me on fire," Gelin said. "They were choking me with a blanket. I saw death in front of me. I said my final prayers."

Abused by family members

Gelin is not alone. A study by the Québec government in 1989 found that one in 10 people over 60 will be abused in one form or another. Senior abuse can include theft, neglect, manipulation and, as in Gelin's case, physical abuse. One quarter of the abusers will be immediate family members.

Last July, the federal government gave Concordia University and the Notre-Dame-de-Grace/Montréal-West CLSC a $281,000 grant to conduct research into senior abuse and to develop a manual which will include measures for prevention.

Psychology Professor Myrna Reis said the three-year project, dubbed Project Care, will further develop an intervention model created by the NDG CLSC in 1989. Support groups will also be set up for abused seniors.

"The problem is that they don't have social support or someone to just call up and lean on," Reis said. "We will also be training volunteers to act as buddies and do things like take them to do their banking."

Reis and Daphne Nahmiash, an adjunct professor of Social Work at McGill University, are co-investigators of Project Care.

A team of elder abuse social workers, nurses and co-ordinators will continue to create intervention plans and strategies. Professional volunteers, such as lawyers and psychologists, will also be on hand to act as consultants.

The project will also try to sensitize people to recognize if seniors are being abused, Reis said. "There are many types of abuse. It's not always obvious. For example, not giving a senior her/his medication is a kind of abuse."

The government has entrusted Concordia and Reis's team with administering the money. Reis hopes the manual can be reproduced for use across the country.

As the number of seniors rises in Canada, so does the concern for their physical and psychological well-being. Health and Welfare Canada estimates that some 315,000 seniors over the age of 65 across Canada have been financially, psychologically or physically abused.

More than two years have passed since Gelin was attacked and tortured for more than four hours. "I'm still scared, but I fought in the Second World War and I've seen a lot of terrible things. I try not to think of it too often."

Vancouver poet makes 'creative' move

by Ray Beauchemin

Sharon Thesen's timing is impeccable.

The last time the Vancouver poet came to Montréal was in 1980, with the heat of turbid Québec politics juxtaposed against the cold and soot of winter.

She left here with a series of poems called Radio New France Radio. It was verse "about my western mind and perception trying to take in this old, snowbound, cold and troubled city."

Now she's back, this time as this semester's writer-in-residence in Concordia's Creative Writing Programme. And despite the coming constitutional referendum, the politics are no less opaque.

What does this mean for Thesen? More poetry, of course.

Governor-General's Award nominee

Thesen is the author of five books of poetry, the most recent of which was The Pangs of Sunday. She has been nominated twice for the Governor-General's Award for Poetry, for The Beginning of the Long Dash and Confabulations.

She won the Governor-General Award for editing The Vision Tree: Selected Poems of Phyllis Webb.

Her most recent critical work was editing New Long Poem Anthology, published last year.

Thesen is taking time off from her job at Capilano Community College in Vancouver, where she makes up one fifth of the English Department, teaching basic grammar, composition —and the occasional treat, 20th-century poetry — to "lead a literary life with other writers who know my work. It's a salon situation that I find appealing." Thesen has been at Capilano since 1975.

That she'll have the time to write poetry and put together a collection of critical essays on feminist poetics and theory is a boon.

Toward the cashless society

Don't expect Concordia's new cash card managers to talk to you. They can't. They're machines.

The arrival of the electronic cash card manager means no more time digging into your pockets for spare change to buy a newspaper or make a photocopy.

There are four cash card managers at Concordia: one in each of the libraries, one in the Henry F. Hall Building lobby near the Bishop St. entrance, and one in the Administration Building on the Loyola Campus.

You do have to have cash on hand when you buy the card, but after that, you can use your card instead of cash at the Copy Centre, the microfiche reader/printer, and the CD-ROM reference system.

Put a loony into one slot to get your card. Then put as much money as you want (up to the limit on the machine) into another slot. If you put in $20, you can use the card (where it's accepted) until you have made a total of $20 in purchases. See?

Universities prime customers

Campbell Richardson of ITC Systems in Scarborough, Ont., which makes the machines, said the product is being marketed in universities and colleges rather than in the corporate world.

"Universities are a closed environment, which makes them ideal," Richardson said. "Many of them, like Concordia, are physically spread out, making the collection of cash time-consuming and labour-intensive. The cash card manager centralizes the use of cash."

Good source of feedback

Another reason for going after the youthful user, Richardson said, is that students are a good source of feedback on innovations.

"Young people are more open-minded. To get them into businesses, we'll have to wait until these students are out there demanding them."

What can the cash card manager do for you?

"Life is easier without cash, and everything's slightly cheaper with the card," Richardson said.

The catch? You're paying for your purchases in advance, and, as with conventional credit cards, it's tempting to spend more.

Richardson has placed cash card managers at McGill, Vanier College and the Université de Montréal. However, Concordia will have the first electronic cash-card Gazette dispensers in town.

A T A GLANCE

by Donna Varrica

This column welcomes the submissions of all Concordia faculty and staff, to promote and encourage individual and group activities in teaching and research, and to recognize work-related achievements.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF), with headquarters in Washington, D.C., has nominated Economics Professor Jaleel Ahmad to its International Panel of Fiscal Experts. The panel advises the IMF on its economic policies (See Off the Cuff, page 2).

Philosophy Department Chair Christopher Gray delivered several papers during the summer months, including "Isaiah Berlin on Freedom" to the Canadian Philosophical Association in May in Charlottetown, "Laws and Moralities" to the Canadian Section of the International Legal Philosophy Association in June, also in Charlottetown, and "Indian Rights: Las Casas on Violence and Coexistence" to the International Society on Violence and Coexistence in July in Montréal. In August, Gray travelled to Guadalajara, in Jalisco, Mexico to participate in a conference titled Hacia un Mundo Nuevo en el V Centenario del Encuentro de America y Europa where he presented "Jurisprudential Status of Aborigines: The Canadian Situation" and "Las Casas' Medieval Ideology." He delivered the latter paper, in English, in August in Ottawa at a conference of the Société internationale pour l'étude de la philosophie médiévale.

Marianne Gosztanyi Ainley, Principal of the Simone de Beauvoir Institute, gave a presentation titled "A Woman of Integrity: Kathleen Gough's 'Career' in Canada, 1967-90" at the Canadian Anthropological Society (CASCA) in Montréal in May. Later that month, she participated in a round table discussion at the Canadian Women's Association Conference. The title of her presentation was "Integrating Women, Science, and Technology into the Women's Studies Curriculum."

Chairs from the Faculty of Arts and Science spent a day at McGill University's Gault Estate in May. It was a day of discussion about setting priorities for the Faculty. Another is planned for today (Sept. 24) for the first Chairs meeting of the fall.

Anna Tam, a PhD student in Mechanical Engineering, has been awarded the prestigious Zonta International Amelia Earhart Fellowship Award for the 1992-93 academic year. The fellowship is open to women who are pursuing graduate studies in aerospace-related sciences and engineering. Only 35 fellowships are awarded annually and each $6,000 (U.S.) grant is renewable. Tam's doctoral studies are under the supervision of Mechanical Engineering Professor W.G. (Fred) Habashi.

Also in the Department of Mechanical Engineering, PhD student Raghu Gurram has received the one-year $20,000 Bourse de mérite exceptionnel en ingénierie offered by the Institut de recherche en santé et en sécurité du travail du Québec (IRSST). Gurram is co-supervised by Professor Subhash Rakheja and Gerard Gouw. His research topic is "Measurement and Analysis of Hand-Arm Vibrations."

Professor L.J. Sanders, Acting Chair of the Classics Department, presented the paper "Nationalistic Policies and Recommendations in the VII and VIII Platonic Epistles," at the Classical Association of Canada's Learned Societies Conference in Charlottetown, P.E.I., last May. His article "What did Timaeus think of Dion?" was recently published in Hermes 120 (1992), pages 205-215.

Communication Studies Professor William Buxton presented a paper titled "Centre/Periphery Communication in India: The case of Voluntary Associations in the National Biogas Development Programme" at the Meetings of the International Association for Mass Communication Research (IAMCR), Gauruja (Sao Paulo), Brazil, in August.

Greenwood Press has just published African Studies Thesaurus: Subject Headings for Library Users as no. 29 in their Bibliographies and Indexes in Afro-American and African Studies series. The author is Freda Otchere, Senior Cataloguing and Standards Librarian in the Technical Services Division of the Library.

Welcome to new Concordia staff: Donald Beattie (Biology); Lorraine Beck (Computing Services); Barbara Black (Public Relations), replacing Sharon Bishin who has taken the Communications Officer posting in the Faculty of Commerce and Administration; Ronald Boucher (Diploma in Accountancy); Susanne Dragffy (Bookstore); Eric Gagnon (Computing Services); Ida Gianelli (CASS); Linda Hansen (Financial Aid and Awards); Lynn Kirk (Student Affairs/Fine Arts); Charles Lynch (Exercise Science); Jolanta Manowska (Liaison); Michael Marak (Computing Services); Dorothy McLeod (Office of the Vice-Rector, Institutional Relations and Finance); Rosaria Sabatino (Registrar's Office); Dennis Scandella (Computing Services); Karen Ward (Environmental Health and Safety); and Marina Wolanski (Health Services).

Re-valuing teaching: an open letter to the presidents of Canadian universities

This letter was recently sent to all presidents, principals and rectors of Canadian institutions of higher learning. It was signed by 47 winners of 3M Fellowships, the prestigious national teaching awards, including three of Concordia's own.

In March 1990, the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada (AUCC) established an independent commission of inquiry "to examine the ability of university education to adapt rapidly to the needs of a Canada that is and will continue to be increasingly dependent on the essential national resource of well-educated citizens." The findings and recommendations of that commission were published in 1991 as the Smith Report.

Teaching undervalued

A primary concern of the report is the status of teaching in the universities. In Dr. [Stuart] Smith's words, "teaching is seriously undervalued at Canadian universities and nothing less than a total recommitment to it is required."

To this general concern, he adds a list of specific ones including the imbalance between the perceived value of research and of teaching, the relative disregard of teaching in regard to hiring, tenure, and promotion decisions, and the undue extent to which scholarship is defined and measured exclusively on the basis of research publication, while ignoring the range of scholarly activities essential to producing effective teaching and learning.

As recipients of the 3M Teaching Fellowship, we share many of the concerns and conclusions of Dr. Smith regarding the current status of teaching in Canadian universities. From our experiences, at universities across the country, teaching is indeed undervalued, at times to the extent that in several institutions new colleagues are encouraged to neglect teaching so that they can get on with the business of research publication that will earn them tenure and promotion.

Because of this neglect and demeaning of the universities' central mission, we are urging you to use your influence and office as president of a Canadian university to initiate, promote, and facilitate discussions and activities that will enhance the status and improve the overall quality of teaching within your university.

While we respect the important role that research has, and know from our own practice the fundamental way in which research, broadly defined, contributes to good teaching, we hope through your leadership that the education of undergraduate students will become recognized as a mission of your university no less important than research, that good teaching will become as highly recognized and valued as good research, and that those faculty members who are truly excellent in teaching are no less valued and celebrated than those who excel in research.

As President, you have the capacity to enhance the status of teaching in many ways. You can:

- stress, publicly and repeatedly, the importance of effective teaching and bring attention to those teaching and learning activities that are meritorious;
- encourage the reporting of innovative teaching activities in annual reports and newsletters;
- foster experimentation and innovation in both the curriculum and the ways in which it is presented;
- ensure that your university has done all it can to provide a physical and intellectual environment that facilitates good teaching and learning;
- encourage the establishment of several annual teaching awards throughout your faculties and celebrate those who achieve these awards;
- ensure the sabbatical leaves for teaching and curriculum-related projects are not only permitted, but encouraged;
- Your university's encouragement and nurturing of good teaching can be demonstrated and furthered through the presence and support of an instructional or educational development office that disseminates information on teaching and learning, that plans and offers workshops, seminars, conferences, and courses on teaching, and that coordinates peer consultant and peer support programmes.

Library users face the music

To the editor:

On the afternoon of Tuesday, September 15th, I went on an informative escorted tour of the new Library. After the tour, I sat down in a study area, like hundreds of other patrons, to consult some library materials. Suddenly, our work was interrupted by the sound of loudly amplified music (sic) from loudspeakers placed near the entrance of the library. This was only a sample of a long series of noisy activities that, according to the frustrated and angry library staff I spoke to, will be a permanent aspect of the building's multipurpose nature.

Our institution's mission is a varied one, but should the social activities in Place Concordia take priority over, let alone sabotage, Concordia's academic activities? I believe that an answer to this question from the relevant administrators is urgently needed.

Former Governor-General replaces Alan B. Gold

Jeanne Sauvé appointed Chancellor of University

The Rt. Honourable Jeanne Sauvé, former Governor-General of Canada, has been named the new Chancellor of Concordia University, succeeding Chief Justice Alan B. Gold, of the Québec Superior Court, whose term ends next week.

Sauvé's five-year appointment was approved at a June meeting of the University's Board of Governors.

Educated at the University of Ottawa and the Université de Paris, Sauvé has had a long and distinguished career as a journalist, politician, cabinet minister and children's rights advocate.

Sauvé served with UNESCO's youth section in Paris during the 1950s before turning to a career as a public affairs journalist and broadcaster for newspapers, magazines and radio and television networks in Canada and the U.S.

She was first elected to the House of Commons in 1972, and served in several cabinets as Minister of Science and Technology, Environment, and Communications before being named Speaker of the House of Commons in 1980. She also served as the federal government representative at the United Nations Conference on Populations and the Law of the Sea during 1974 and 1975.

Great Montrealer

Since returning to private life in 1990, Sauvé has been appointed to numerous boards of directors, including Industrial Alliance Life Insurance, Power Broadcasting Inc., and Bombardier Inc. She is also Founder and Honorary Chair of the Jeanne Sauvé Youth Foundation. In 1991, she was honoured with the title of Great Montrealer.

A recipient of many awards and prizes (such as the Jean-Louis Lévesque Foundation Merit Award, the Golda Meir Honouree Award and the Conseil du Patronat du Québec Prix de la Carrière), Sauvé is also an Honorable Fellow of the Royal Architecture Institute of Canada, and has received honorary degrees from more than a dozen universities in Canada and abroad. —LZ

Concordia's new Chancellor, the Rt. Honourable Jeanne Sauvé

Groome named Chairman of Board of Governors

Reginald K. Groome, former Chairman and President of Hilton Canada Inc., has become the new Chairman of the University's Board of Governors.

The appointment takes effect Sept. 30. Groome replaces Me P. André Gervais, Q.C., who has held the post for five years.

Groome was first elected to Concordia's Board of Governors in 1980. He has served as Vice-Chairman since 1986 and is also Vice-Chairman of the Executive Committee, responsible for budget, audit, benefits, collective bargaining and stewardship.

In 1991, he was appointed chairman of a committee to review procedures used in the recruitment and selection of candidates for senior academic and administrative appointments. Since its creation in 1989, he has also chaired the Board's Review Committee, which considers appeals provided for under Concordia's Code of Conduct (Non-Academic).

A native Montrealer, Groome was a member of the Hilton organization from 1957 until 1990, when he took early retirement as Chairman and President of Hilton Canada Inc. and Vice-President, Development, for North America, of Hilton International Co., New York. In 1980, he was appointed an Officer of the Order of Canada by then-Governor-General Edward Schreyer.

After attending the High School of Montréal and McGill University, Groome entered the field of communications, working in a publishing house and for the CBC's international broadcast service. He was an overseas correspondent for seven major Canadian daily newspapers in the 1950s.

Groome is active in many areas of community service. He is past President, former Honorary President and now the Honorary Vice-President of the Boy Scouts of Canada. He is also Chairman of the World Scout Foundation in Canada and the Scouts Canada Trust.

He received the Outstanding Citizen

Award from the Montréal Citizenship Council in 1976, the Queen's Jubilee Medal in 1977, and the inaugural Canadian B'Nai Brith Award of Merit in 1978. He was also presented with the Meritorious Citizen Award by Lieutenant-Governor Jean-Pierre Côté in 1980 and the McGill University Management Achievement Award in 1984.

Groome is past President of the Montréal Board of Trade and a past Chairman of the Tourism Industry Association of Canada. He is a life Governor and Director of the Montréal General Hospital Centre and Foundation and Governor of the Chambre de Commerce du Québec. In 1990, he was awarded the Hotelier of the Year honour by the Québec Hotel Association.

Sister Eileen McIlwaine, President of Marianopolis College, has been elected Vice-Chairwoman of the Board of Governors. Claude Taylor, chairman of the Board of Air Canada, has been re-elected to the position of Vice-Chairman. —DGV

The Centre for Research in Human Development

CRDH was created to encourage and support research on patterns of social, emotional and cognitive functioning across the human lifespan and to assist in the training of researchers in these areas.

The Centre focuses on three priority areas:

- normal social and cognitive development
- atypical developmental patterns
- the study of competence in elderly population

Max Barlow takes over from Catherine MacKenzie

Geography professor appointed Associate Vice-Rector

Geography Professor Max Barlow has been appointed Associate Vice-Rector, Services (Physical Environment).

Barlow takes over the position from Catherine MacKenzie, who, following an administrative leave, will return to the Department of Art History. The appointment was effective Aug. 1.

Barlow joined Concordia in 1976 as an Assistant Professor in the Geography Department. He was appointed chair of the department in 1986 and remained in that position until 1991.

Barlow studied at the University of Wales, the University of Cincinnati and McGill University. He has taught in the U.S., England, as well as at three other Canadian universities.

Barlow has conducted research into Montréal's role as an international city, initiated a comparative study of metropolitan government in Canada and Australia, and has developed course materials for Political Geography. He specializes in the fields of urban, economic and political geography.

He has published two books, Spatial Dimensions of Urban Government (John Wiley, 1981) and Metropolitan Government (Routledge, London), and was co-editor of a third, Changing Public Administration: Experiences in Czechoslovakia and Elsewhere (University of Amsterdam, 1992).

He is a member of three associations of geographers in Canada, the United States and Britain, as well as the Association of Canadian Studies in the United States, the International Travel and Tourism Research Association and the Western Regional Science Association.

Avoid jaywalking on de Maisonneuve Blvd.

Why did the Concordia student/faculty/staff member jaywalk across the road? To get to the other side of de Maisonneuve Blvd. as fast as possible without using the tunnel or walking to the corner to obey traffic lights.

With the opening of the new library complex and with the start of the new school year, the practice of dashing across the street has alarmed those units responsible for the safety and well-being of Concordians. Signs have been posted on the doors of both the new building and the Henry F. Hall Building advising people not to jaywalk.

History Professor Stephen Scheinberg raised the point during question period at last week's Senate meeting, calling it "a tragedy waiting to happen."

Vice-Rector, Services, Charles Bertrand, said the issue was one of great concern for him and that his office had already enlisted the aid of the Montréal Urban Community (MUC) Police Department and the municipal department which controls traffic signals.

"We've asked the city to stop the synchronization of the traffic lights on de Maisonneuve Blvd. so that cars will not be tearing down the street at 70 km per hour, endangering pedestrians" Bertrand said.

Also, the possibility of having the police ticket jaywalkers has been discussed. The city ruled out the possibility of erecting a median as it would interfere with the flow of traffic, already congested along the road.

Longer lights

Political Science Professor Maria Peluso suggested that perhaps longer lights might alleviate the problem, as it has in front of the Roddick Gates at McGill University at the corner of Sherbrooke St. and McGill College Ave.

In a related item, Rector Patrick Kenniff announced that as a result of the reconstruction of new sidewalks around the core of the downtown campus, the city sidewalks in front of the Hall Building are finally even with the building's pavement. For many years, the sidewalks were six to eight inches lower. There are plans to repave the sidewalks along Bishop and Mackay Streets in the future.

Vatistas new Associate Dean of School of Graduate Studies

Georgios Vatistas, professor of Mechanical Engineering, has been named Associate Dean of the School of Graduate Studies.

The three-year appointment was effective June 1.

Vatistas has been at Concordia since 1977, beginning as a research assistant in the Mechanical Engineering Department. He served as Graduate Programme Director for the department from June 1990 to June 1992.

His research interests are in the area of general fluid mechanics. However, the theme of Vatistas's research activities is vortex dynamics and applications.

Vatistas contributed to the development seven years ago of the Fluid Mechanics Research Laboratory, which consists of two vortex chambers, a cyclone separator model, a water tunnel for vortex breakdown visualizations, a vortex tube and a vortex pump.

Vatistas is a member of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA) and the Canadian Aeronautics and Space Institute (CASI).

Hundreds attend Student Services Festival

Guiding students through the services maze

By Buzz Bourdon

Having problems with that uncooperative landlord? Need some spiritual advice? Don't know where to turn because your loan is late?

The University can help find answers to these and many other questions.

Hundreds of students filed through Place Concordia last Wednesday to check out the Student Services Festival.

Organized by a number of Concordia clubs and departments, the festival was designed to show students what is available to them in terms of services.

For those students having trouble deciding what to do with their spare time, there were a host of associations representing various ethnic groups. Other clubs on hand included the Assembly of First Nations, the Concordia Animal Rights Association, the Women's Centre, the Central America Committee, the Economic Students' Association, the Caribbean Students Association and the Political Science Students' Association.

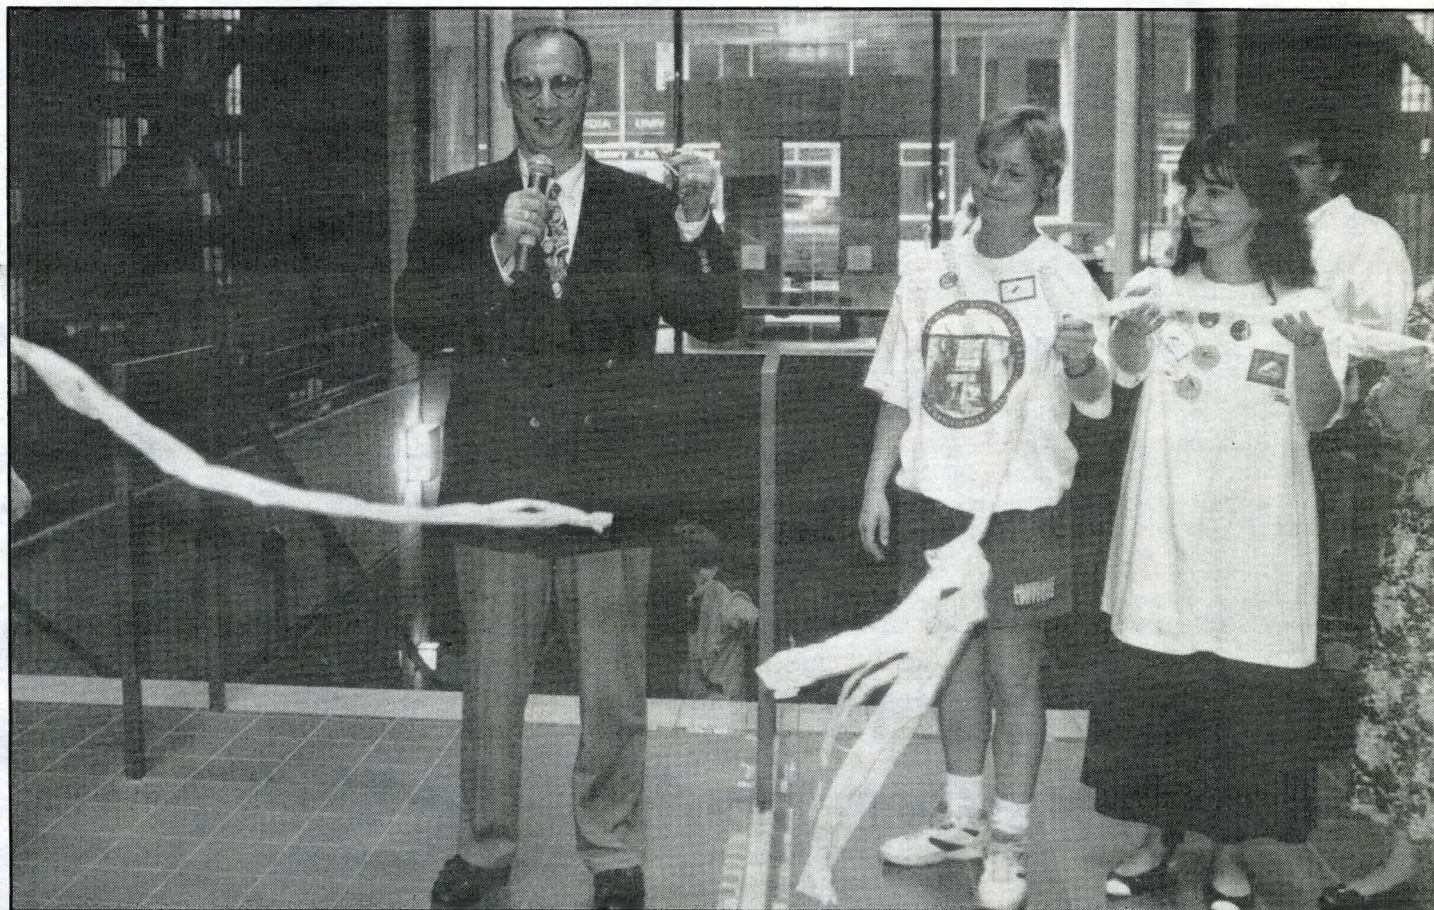

Besides looking and listening, there were a lot of freebies for the asking, including the tables set up by Concordia's Health Services. Karen Monaghan, a certificate program student in community service, said she was impressed with the free condoms and pamphlets describing how to avoid sexually transmitted diseases, or STDs.

"It shows how important education is and I hope lots of people are reading these [pamphlets]," she said.

Concordia's nurse and Health Educator, Diane Bellemare, agreed.

"We're focusing a lot on STDs, on AIDS," she said. "It's an area we deal a lot with. We certainly do more than 1,000 STD tests per year."

Health Services also provides information on other health-related issues, including nutrition, birth control, abortion and drug or alcohol problems.

Despite an increasing awareness of the need to practice safe sex, Bellemare said she wonders if students are practicing what AIDS educators are preaching.

"We suspect that people are using condoms more and more," she said. "I think awareness is increasing, but I wonder if behaviour is changing. There are studies that indicate that behaviour isn't changing as fast as educators would like. We have a large number of students showing up with genital warts. We just have to keep repeating the message."

World's Longest Day raises $24,000 for AIDS/HIV support organizations

Telethon director earns spot in Guinness book

In the end, it wasn't so much the record they set, but the message they sent out.

Concordia's student television station, CUTV, raised just over $24,000 last week during their World's Longest Day telethon.

The purpose of the 60-hours-plus on-the-air was to raise awareness about AIDS, said producer Colin Kish.

Director David Jedeikin also earned a spot in The Guinness Book of World Records for the longest continuous TV transmission under one director, beating the previous record of 48 hours, three minutes set in 1990 at a college in Westerville, Ohio.

Even though the telethon fell short of its $40,000 goal, Kish said he's satisfied with how things turned out.

"I'm very happy with the show. More than 2,000 people pledged money, and about 20,000 people were watching at any one time during prime time."

Close to 100 acts were booked to appear at four different venues, including Place Concordia, the atrium of the new downtown library complex. More than 250 people helped out during the three days on the air.

The reviews were not all good. Kish said the volume of one of the acts late Tuesday afternoon almost got them thrown out of the new building, whose main function is the library which occupies three floors. Library users complained about the disruptive noise levels drifting up through the building to study areas in the library, (see letter to the editor, page 4).

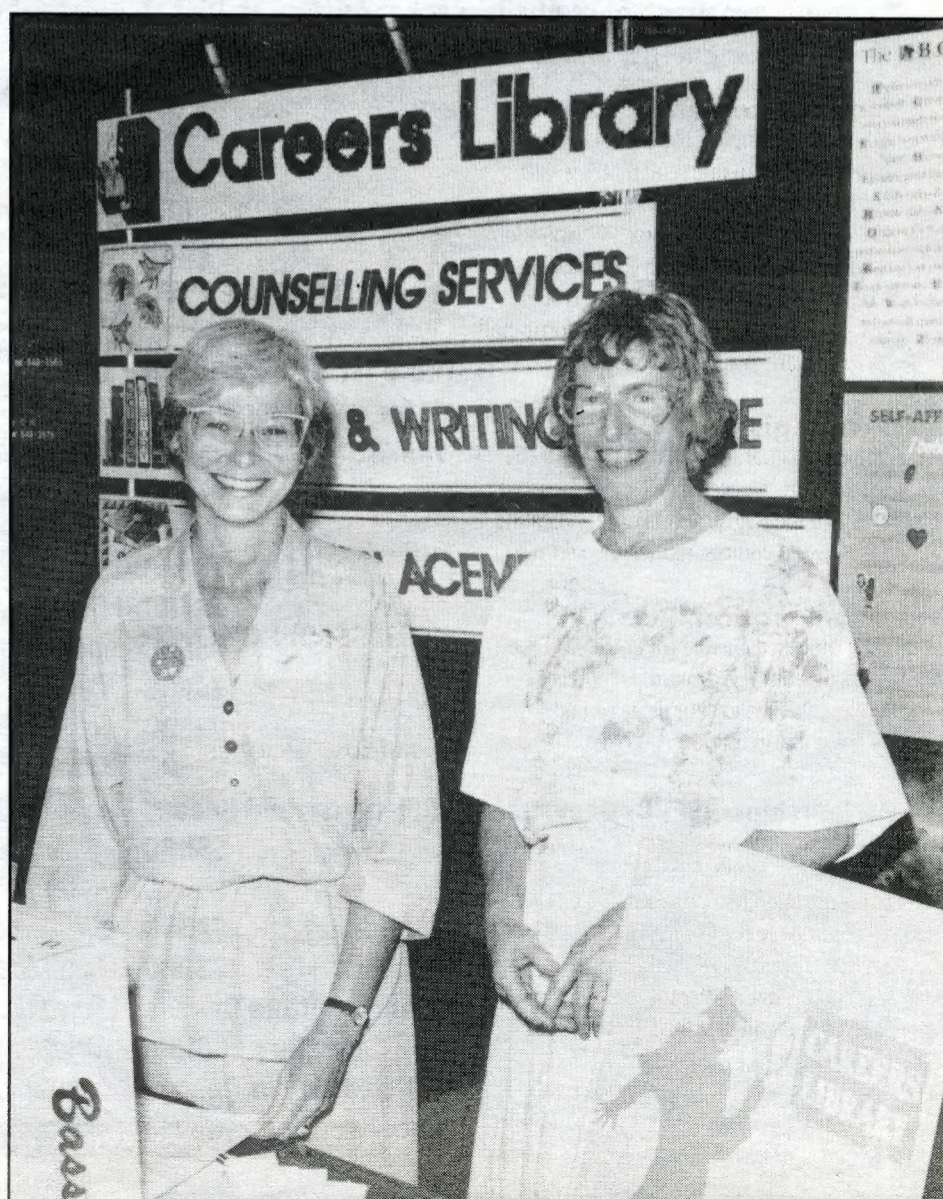

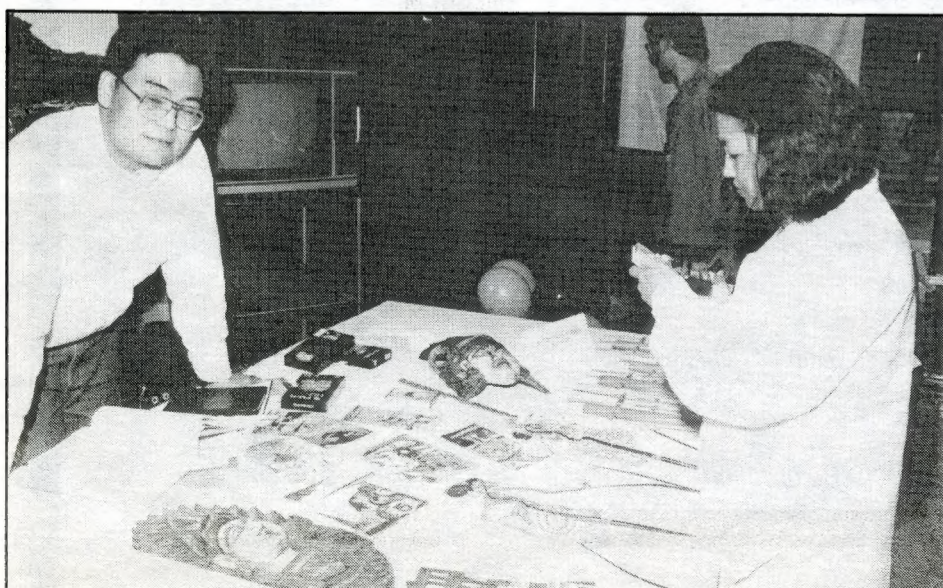

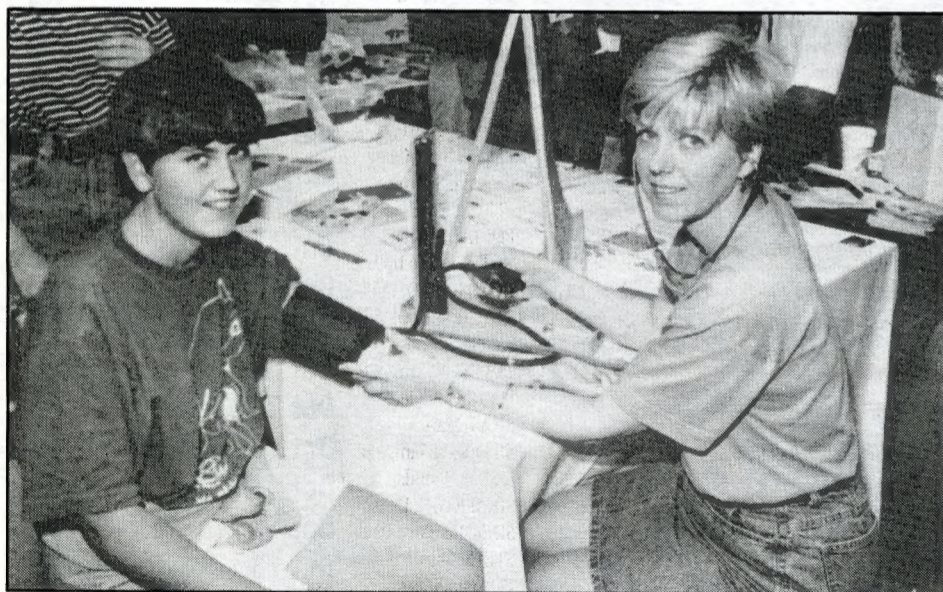

Letters of apology

Producers and administrators rallied to keep the disruption to a minimum. Elizabeth Morey, Special Projects Director, has already sent letters of apology to the units who were affected by the disruption. In it, she stated, "CUTV had no way of knowing how sound would travel within the new building.... The nature of the event, with a large number of acts who had signed contracts, made it impossible for all acts to be cancelled.

"Please rest assured that now that the problem has been identified, all future events within Place Concordia will be reviewed to ensure that there is minimal disruption to those working and studying in this building."

The proceeds of the event will go to two Montréal AIDS support groups.

Healing process takes time

Do not be surprised if you are still affected by the shock and tragedy of Aug. 24. It takes time and the reactions and suffering cannot be eliminated or taken away — they must be lived. They will not last forever if you respect them and take care of yourself.

The following three reminders will help you in your recovery:

DIVERSITY

Reactions, healing, and the amount of time for healing are DIVERSE and individual — with no wrong or right way. Reactions are not pathological, but rather normal and good responses to an abnormal experience. If your symptoms are decreasing, even if only slightly, you are in the healing process. If they are increasing, seek help for yourself.

The DIVERSITY of feelings that you may be experiencing in relation to the tragedy are referred to as post-traumatic stress symptoms, which normally manifest themselves only after a period of about four weeks, and are in no way pathological.

They may include a lack of concentration, sadness, fear, aggressivity, powerlessness, vulnerability, withdrawal or solitude, denial, guilt, insomnia, change in appetite, overactivity, crying or laughing spells, lower immunity and fatigue.

CARE

Really listen to yourself and CARE for yourself. Listen to your body and respond, caring for your needs. The following are some ways to CARE for yourself:

- Be patient and tolerant with yourself

- Accept your emotions, but don't wallow in them
- Find concrete ways to express emotions: jog, dance, scream, write, draw or paint, garden, have a massage, cry, walk, swim, be with nature.
- Touching and being touched helps reduce reactions.
- For insomnia, don't fight it; find ways to relax, such as a warm bath, drink tisanes or warm milk.

Nightmares, are normal and an indication that your body is integrating your experience. Care for your emotional wounding as you would if you were physically sick.

SHARE

Find a way to express yourself and your feelings. Talking about your reactions keeps them from becoming physical symptoms. SHARE with a co-worker, friend, family, or counsellor. It can be with anyone or wherever you feel heard and supported.

The healing process takes time. Respect your DIVERSITY and others' DIVERSITY, CARE for yourself, and SHARE with others.

Homecoming concert dedicated to slain professors

Great performances

An evening with the performing arts promises to be a showcase of Concordia's finest talent

By Barbara Black

Homecoming, the annual gathering of alumni and present Concordians which always includes parties and football, will be launched this year with a concert of fine music, theatre and dance. An Evening of the Performing Arts will be held next Thursday evening (Oct. 1) in the D. B. Clarke Theatre at 7:30 p.m.

Organized by the Departments of Music, Contemporary Dance and Theatre, it will feature chamber music and jazz by students in the Department of Music, and performances by voice coach Barbara Lewis and recent Contemporary Dance graduate Erika Sidler.

Barbara Lewis is a distinguished singer, songwriter and actress who specializes in creating non-traditional musical theatre. With Richard Hunt on piano, she will perform excerpts from The Book of Dreams, which was inspired by the life and work of environmental writer Rachel Carson. The text is by Nicholas Regush, a medical reporter for the Montréal Gazette.

The Book of Dreams, which has elements of singing, dance, dialogue and mime, was first performed in May 1991 in Pittsburgh, and premiered in Montréal last February at Concordia.

Erika Sidler, who graduated in May, will perform A White Moment on a Hot Coal, which she choreographed to original music, Kinta Talkin! by David Ranger. The piece was premiered at Danscene '92, a five-day conference of dance educators held last spring in Vancouver.

As she created A White Moment, Sidler said, she went far beyond her grounding in gymnastics to find a newly expanded technical vocabulary.

"I found out how the spiral works, for example," she said. "And by focusing on the physics of movement and improvisation, I began to understand connections in the body."

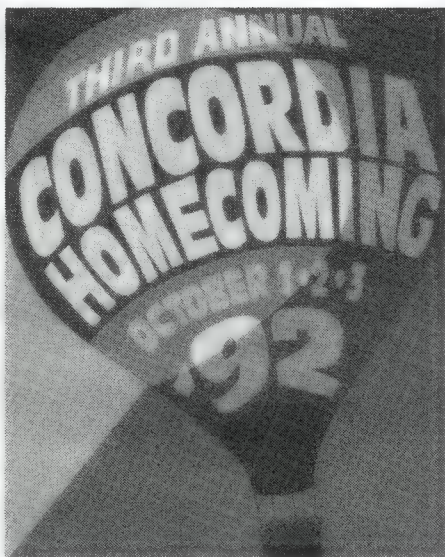

A White Moment is built on a theme of heat: a desert, a Dickensian factory, fire and wind, passion and death.

Unveiling

The concert, is dedicated to Matthew Douglass, Michael Hogben and A. Jaan Saber, the three professors slain on Aug.

24. It will be followed by a reception in Place Concordia, the atrium of the new downtown library complex, at which Rector Patrick Kenniff will unveil a plaque honouring alumni, faculty and others who contributed to the building's capital fund.

Tickets for An Evening with the Performing Arts are $15, and are available from Leisha LeCouvrie, Homecoming co-ordinator, at 848-3815.

What to do Two calls are necessary in medical emergencies in case of emergency

Medical Emergency Response

In case of a medical emergency on either campus, it is necessary to make two telephone calls. All telephone numbers are listed as though the calls were being made from an internal Concordia phone.

First, phone 9-911 to alert Urgences Santé. They will go only to the civic address (i.e., street and number) of the specified campus. They will not follow other directions.

Downtown, give the address of the Henry F. Hall Building as 1455 de Maisonneuve Blvd. West, or the specific address of the annex. The new library complex address is 1400 de Maisonneuve Blvd. West. The Loyola Campus's civic address is 7141 Sherbrooke St. West.

After 9-911, phone Security: -3707 at Loyola, -3717 at SGW. Give them the specific location of the emergency.

Urgences Santé will automatically go to the Security Desk, officers will direct them to the emergency.

Assess the seriousness of the emergency and follow these steps:

1. Serious/Life-Threatening Emergencies

- » Call Urgences Santé (9-911)
Give them your name, location and the nature of the emergency. Urgences Santé will provide telephone instructions on how to deal with the emergency until help arrives.
- » Provide first aid assistance, if you are qualified to do so.
- » Call Security: Loyola (-3707), SGW (-3717). Give your name, location and nature of the emergency, and tell Security whether you have called 9-911. Security will send a trained guard to your location to assist you until Urgences Santé arrives.
- » Health Services may be called for additional assistance:
Monday to Friday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.
Loyola (-3575); SGW (-3565)
Otherwise, await assistance from Security.
- » When Security or Urgences Santé arrive on the scene, describe the first aid which was administered, if any.
- » Complete an Accident/Incident/Occupational Disease Report, available from the Office of Environmental Health and Safety: -4877.

2. Non-life-threatening situations or emergencies not requiring Urgences Santé

(If in doubt, the responder should treat the problem as serious/life-threatening)

- » Call Security: Loyola (-3707), SGW (-3717). Give your name, location and nature of the emergency. Security will send a trained guard to your location to assist with first aid.
- » Provide first-aid assistance, if you are qualified to do so, or enlist the aid of someone who is in your area.

- » Health Services may be called for additional assistance:
Monday to Friday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Loyola (-3575); SGW (-3565)
Otherwise, await assistance from Security.

- » Recommend that the injured party seek medical advice, and, if possible, accompany the injured party to Health Services, a CLSC or a hospital emergency room.
- » Complete an Accident/Incident/Occupational Disease Report, available from the Office of Environmental Health and Safety: -4877.

Hospitals closest to each campus:

Loyola: Queen Elizabeth Hospital, 2100 Marlowe. Tel.: 9-488-2311

SGW: Montréal General Hospital, 1650 Cedar. Tel.: 9-937-6011

Reddy Memorial, 4039 Tupper. Tel.: 9-933-7511

Fire and Evacuation Procedures

In case of fire:

- » If fire is suspected (smoke or the smell of smoke), call Security, Loyola (-3707); SGW (-3717). Provide the following information: Name, location and nature of the problem. Meet the Security Officers when they arrive to direct them to the source of the problem.
- » If a fire is established, activate the fire alarm immediately. (In a building with no fire alarm system, alert the other people in the building.)
- » Call Security, Loyola (-3707); SGW (-3717). Provide the following information: Name, location and nature of the problem.
- » Call 9-911 for the Montréal Fire Department.
- » Evacuate the building as per the General Evacuation Procedure.
- » No effort should be made to deal with the fire unless such action is compatible with the safety of all concerned.
- » Meet the fire department or Security when they arrive to direct them to the source of the problem.
- » In the event of a major fire necessitating a general alarm, such an alarm may be activated in the form of continuous ringing of bells or notification via telephone or word of mouth.
- » Use closest safety exits when possible.
- » Obey the directions of monitors and Security.
- » Teaching personnel are expected to supervise the evacuation of their classes.
- » Elevators are not to be used.
- » Exit from stairwell where indicated and move well away from the building.
- » Do not obstruct the exits at streets level. Clear the area.
- » Do not re-enter the building until the "all clear" signal is given by the fire department or Security.

For more information about Emergency Response Procedures, please read your red Emergency Response manual or call or visit Environmental Health and Safety Office at MI Annex (2130 Bishop St.), -4877.

No confidence in CUSA election results: commission

Special Commission of Inquiry into Allegations of Electoral Wrongdoing Final Report

The Special Commission of Inquiry Into Allegations of Electoral Wrongdoing was established by the Board of Directors of the Concordia University Students' Association Inc. at its meeting of March 25, 1992.

The Commission's mandate was to "investigate allegations of possible wrongdoing perpetrated by any officers of the Association, its employees, candidates or their representatives. This Commission may also investigate other issues that arise in the course of their research and deliberations. ...The Commission shall publish a final report, and shall make recommendations to CUSA's Board of Directors."

This report is submitted in fulfilment of the aforementioned mandate.

Subsequent to the Interim Report of May 8, 1992, the Commission continued to meet on numerous occasions to conduct additional interviews and to deliberate over its findings.

Although the Commission found no particular party or person guilty of any specific electoral wrongdoing, the Commission still cannot express confidence in the results of the election for the following reasons:

1. Virtually all accounts heard by the Commission gave the overwhelming sense of non-conformity to standard general election procedures. The opinions expressed in interviews of:

- the Chief Returning Officer

- Judicial Board Members
- Co-presidential candidates
- Ballot counters
- Scrutineers
- Others

indicated a great many flaws in the administrative process for the 1992 annual general election which included:

- the hiring of electoral staff (including the CRO, polling clerks, ballot counters, etc.) lacked organization and was untimely. The CRO was hired far too late to have been able to properly organize such a complicated process.
- Certain ballot counters were hired far too late (up to half an hour before ballot counting was to begin) to ensure their appropriateness to the task.
- As far as the Commission can determine, existing Judicial Board standing orders were not rigorously applied to the electoral process. (eg. Campaigning was not strictly monitored.)
- Elections results were not tabulated in a public manner to ensure complete reliability.

2. The CRO had minimal control over the procedures.

- Security was inadequate.
- Election workers (ballot counters, scrutineers, etc.) were allowed to leave the room unsupervised as counting continued.
- The CRO was absent from the ballot counting room for an extended period of time.
- There were general "smoke breaks" during which ballot counting was not halted.
- There were no sign-in or sign-out procedures for each entry or exit during the counting of the ballots.
- Ballot counters were allowed to leave early, before everything had been counted.

Lack of Decision Making

The ability of the CRO to make appropriate decisions was impeded by the pressure and belligerence of others.

For the reasons stated above, the Commission cannot maintain confidence in the integrity of the process followed during the 1992 Annual General Election. This lack of confidence is generally reflected in many of the interviews conducted by the Commission.

Furthermore the Commission is concerned that Philip Dalton's letter dated February 21, 1992, and addressed "To Whom it May Concern," was not considered a legitimate appeal because it was not specifically addressed to the CRO. In our opinion, the phrase "To Whom it May Concern" is the CRO.

RECOMMENDATION

The Commission maintains that it has no confidence in the final outcome of the 1992 Annual General Election or in the process that produced the results. As there is also a lack of physical evidence available to verify these results, the Commission can only recommend that the Board of Directors also reject the election results and take the appropriate action to ensure a legitimate government is put into place.

Respectfully submitted June 30, 1992.

University not obliged to collect CUSA fees: report

The University is "under no obligation to collect fees on behalf of CUSA," according to a report issued last week by the Commission of Inquiry on Financial Responsibility.

Although the University has legal authority to collect the fees, the commission recommended against it, saying the move "would effectively close down the students' association and perhaps place its future in serious jeopardy."

The inquiry was established by the Office of Vice-Rector, Services, "to ensure that Concordia University fulfills its full legal responsibility when it collects fees for student associations and remits to them the funds collected on their behalf."

Donald Boisvert, the Associate Vice-Rector,

Services (Student Life), has told CUSA co-presidents Charlene Nero and Phil Toone that, if not for its status as a legal entity, CUSA would have been placed under trusteeship following the February elections, the commission's final report said.

The Commission believes the current co-presidents and CUSA board members should allow new elections to take place, following allegations of electoral wrongdoing arising from the February elections. However, that is impossible now as the co-presidents sought and won this summer an interlocutory injunction prohibiting the holding of a new election to replace the results of the February election.

Communication Studies. A Theatre Arts graduate of both the University of Wisconsin-Madison and Cornell, she went on to a PhD in Communications at McGill while raising her twin sons and teaching. She was associated for many years with Concordia's School of Community and Public Affairs, and was a founding member of the Montréal Native Friendship Centre, Manito College and Waseskun Native Halfway House.

Her new duties will not slow her active involvement with projects such as the halfway house, which she considers not only important for its own sake, but to strengthen the link between the University and the native community.

Nor will it impede her drive to continue her own academic work. Two research assistants help her cope with the reading load involved in collating and studying her father's legacy of papers and photographs. They are the basis for a number of works she intends to publish about Lac du Flambeau, the Chippewa reserve in Wisconsin where she was born — and raised, as she has said, "with a moccasin on one foot and a shoe on the other."

Her father, a university graduate who worked in the U.S. native service, acted as a bridge between native and non-native worlds, a role his daughter has taken up in her own way. Valaskakis is an expert on the role of communications in the life of northern people, much sought-after for speeches, film reviews and consultation.

She has a special place in her heart for Concordia's Assembly of First Nations, which is a rallying-point for young people far from home and struggling with the challenges of urban student life. She feels strongly that support for native students can give birth to a real native community within the University.

"We need a native student counsellor, physical space, recruitment, maybe even a summer school," she said. "It's a wonderful time to do that." The encouragement of native students could become a model for similar initiatives among other minorities," she added.

Valaskakis is committed to supporting excellence wherever she finds it. "Some people here are working with such insight and spirit, and sometimes off in a corner, unnoticed." She sees her role as providing them with the opportunity and acknowledgement they need to flourish.

Fabrikant appears at preliminary hearing

Valery Fabrikant has asked for a lawyer, but only to give him legal advice, not to represent him.

The former professor appeared in a Montréal courtroom on Sept. 17. He faces three charges of first-degree murder, two of attempted murder and two of forcible confinement in connection with the August 24 shooting at Concordia that left three professors dead.

Appearing before Québec Court Judge Gilles Cadieux, Fabrikant offered to waive his right to a preliminary hearing and go directly to trial, but was refused.

munity has been assured that a number of activities has been established to honour the victims, there is not enough information about what those activities are.

"We need to be kept informed, so that we can all share in the grieving, as well as the healing process."

In the second, Newman stood to give a ringing endorsement of the Faculty of Engineering and Computer Science and of Dean M.N.S. Swamy. She said she wanted to express her "praise and admiration for a Faculty that came from nothing into one of the finest in the country under the deanship of a most capable man."

The pronouncement, which was passed as a motion, was followed by a unanimous show of support.

Difference of opinion

In other business, Rose Sheinin, Vice-Rector, Academic, read a statement responding to documents circulated at the last meeting of Senate of May 30, 1992. She clarified her position on the procedures used in the appointment of the Dean of Commerce and Administration, stating that the Advisory Search Committee for the Dean, which she chaired, carried out its activities "with diligence, vision, wisdom and commitment to the Faculty and the University, and always in accordance with the Undertaking of Confidentiality."

"To my knowledge, no member of the Search Committee has violated her/his undertaking with Concordia. However, through other legitimate sources, the outcome of the search process became common knowledge. The deliberations of the sub-committee of the Board [of Governors] which intervened after the Search Committee had completed its work, remain unknown, except for the outcome."

At several points during her statement, Sheinin repeated that she was not in agreement with the departure from normal procedure, and that she "could then have done little more than to present her case once again, express her commitment to due process once again, and press her counter-arguments in the matter of the striking and functioning of the Board sub-committee. Regrettably, these arguments were not accepted."

Next week: the Task Force on Senate Reform and the Groome Committee.

Mostly, she just wants "to talk about writing with as many people as I can. Being writer-in-residence provides me with an unbelievably terrific opportunity to do that. You can get too set in your ways at home, the world becomes too small."

Small isn't usually the first word that comes to mind when talking about Vancouver, but that's because of the nature — the "soft turquoise air that caresses you when you walk through it, the blue of the water and the mountains" that surround the city — and not the culture of which it is mostly devoid, Thesen said.

Montréal, on the other hand, is a city of sensations, of both the visceral and intellectual nature, she said. "People look at one another and acknowledge one another's human existence. There's an energy in the street life."

There's energy in the classroom as well. Thesen teaches undergraduate advanced poetry (crosslisted as a graduate writing course) and finds it "heaven." Although she is a poet, and believes her "circuits are not wired for prose," Thesen said there is a lot that prose writers could learn from poetry, just by listening to the rhythm of the words and sentences they compose.

The Concordia community will have the opportunity to hear the rhythm in Thesen's poetry at an 8 p.m. reading, Sept. 25, in the Henry F. Hall Building, room 459.

• If your university has a graduate programme, it should make available to graduate students intending to enter the professoriate a course on university teaching.

The above suggestions are a few of the ways in which the quality of teaching and learning can be enhanced and more highly valued. But none of the above strategies will fully achieve their intended goals until effective teaching is recognized as a demanding, challenging, and worthy scholarly activity, and that excellence in this scholarly activity, on its own merit, can justify tenure and promotion to all professorial levels.

Despite the all-too-frequent protest that good teaching is difficult to measure, we all recognize what it is and does. Good teaching inspires and motivates. At its best, it demands a thorough grasp of the breadth and depth of its subject matter, rigorous criticism, and original approaches to intellectual issues.

It requires the regular assimilation and synthesis of new knowledge, the consequent reorganization of the old, and the development of innovative learning materials, teaching strategies, and techniques. It demonstrates a love of learning and a concern for one's students and discipline, and it elicits intellectual excitement and personal boldness.

It nurtures in students independent thinking and a commitment to life-long learning. It motivates students to learn how to learn and to care about their personal success and the well-being of others. Effective teaching is a most demanding creative and scholarly endeavour.

In our judgment, the time has come for university presidents to examine the extent to which their universities are truly committed to excellence in teaching. It is time for universities to publicize and reinforce standards of teaching effectiveness, and to mandate the highest of teaching expectations. Your leadership is needed to direct Canadian universities back to their most practical and important task: teaching.
